Levee Breach

Santa Clara County (Final)

- The Coyote Creek began to overtop its banks in multiple locations beginning at 1000 hours on 2/21/17. The City of San Jose and Santa Clara Valley Water District had been actively monitoring the creek since Sunday with the incoming storm system but weather and flow predictions did not indicate the Coyote Creek would exceed capacity. The City received information from the Water District that the creek had 7,400 CFS moving capacity, however the overtopping started occurring in multiple areas upon reaching 5,000 CFS, and the flooding was unexpected and prevented the City from issuing warnings to the residents in the area.
- The Cal OES Law Enforcement Emergency Operations Center advised that the mandatory evacuations that were in place have been reduced.
 - The City and County are developing debris removal plans.
 - Due to the sewer service being impacted, portable toilets have been set up in the Rock Springs neighborhood of San Jose.
 - The city has taken over the incident and there are no further request for state assistance.

Flooding

Lake County

Per the Cal OES CDO and Law Emergency Operation Center (LEOC):

- The Big Valley Rancheria and surrounding areas are inundated with water due to the recent rainfall and ground saturation. As a result, areas along the Lake Shore have begun to flood, they are taking preventative measures with sand bags to prevent any additional damage.
 - Cal OES Tribal Liaison is handling concerns regarding the Tribe.
- The Lakeport Police Department have issued mandatory evacuations for portions of the City of Lakeport due to residential flooding from the rising levels of Clear Lake. This has impacted approximately 100 residents.

Key Points

Overview: Mostly dry conditions today except extreme northern CA. Weak weather systems will move through California starting Saturday with periods of rain and mountain snow likely. The system does not look very strong and impacts will be minor.

Flooding: Creeks, rivers, streams, some mainstream rivers, reservoirs and the entire water system has been significantly stressed over the past 6-7 weeks. It will take some time before waters decrease enough to no longer be of concern. Roads, hillsides, and steep grades all remain vulnerable to settling with rock and mud slides possible.

Key Hazards

Today

- Mainly dry except moderate rain and mountain snow northwest CA, Sierra and foothills.

Saturday-Monday

- Cold and weak systems will move over the region.
- These systems may cause just enough snow for mountain travel delays.
- Rainfall/snowfall amounts will generally be light.
- Only minor impacts expected.

Tuesday-Thursday

- Drier once again with streams, creeks, and some main stem rivers running high. No new weather or water hazards expected at this time.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

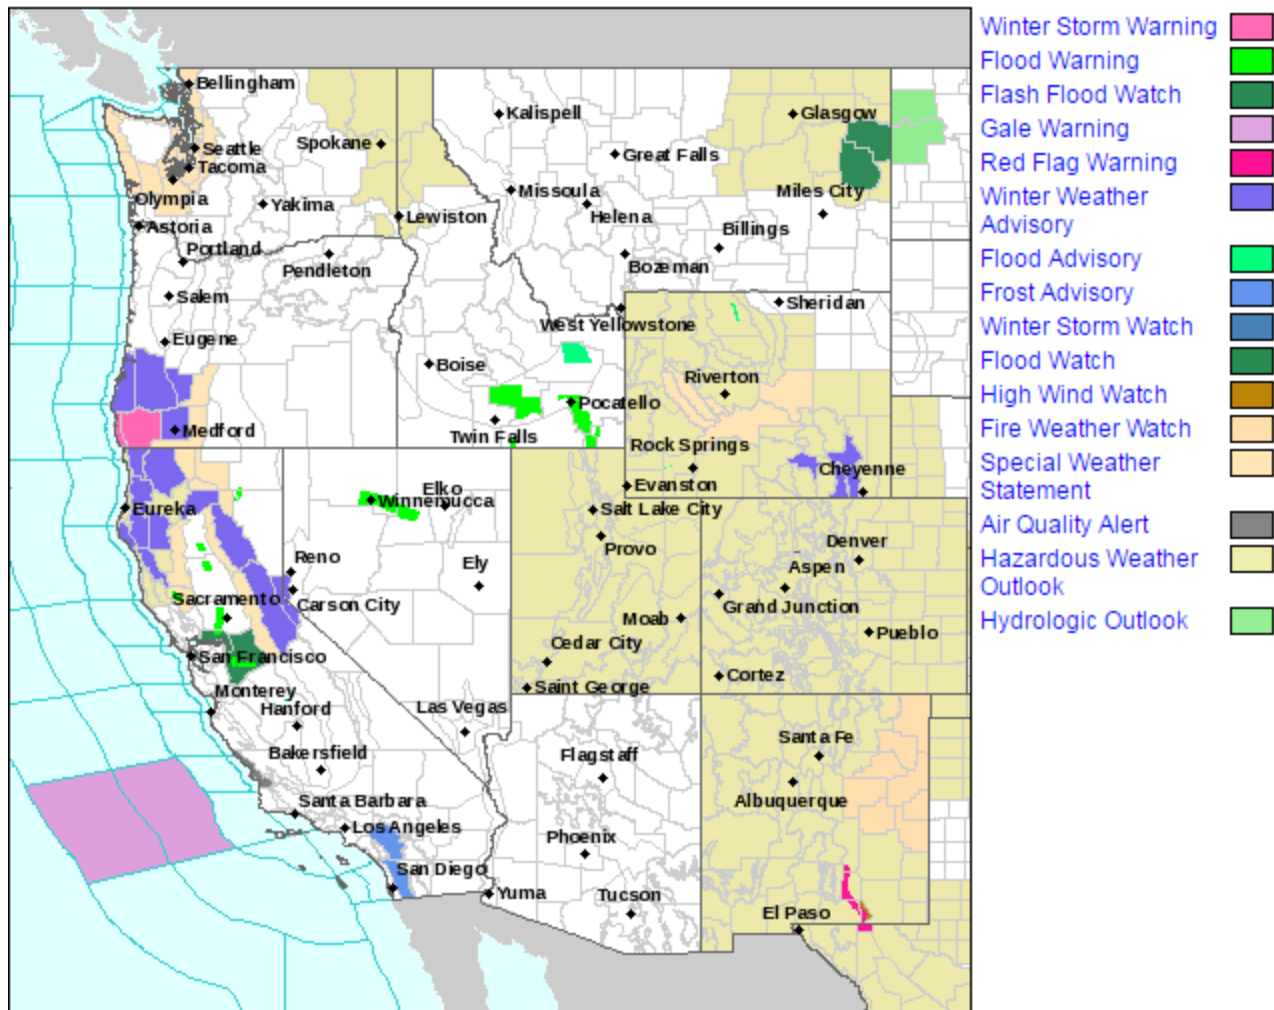

The air mass over the region will remain cold and unstable through Monday. A few showers are possible just about anywhere each day, but mainly in the mountains, with snow levels near 2000 feet in the north and 4000 feet in the south. The best chances for precipitation will be later today and tonight in the north as a weak offshore low pressure area drops in from the north, in western areas on Saturday, and in southern areas late Saturday as the low continues moving southward. A second low pressure area will cause increasing showers in northwest portion of the region by early Sunday, then farther east and south throughout the day as the low progresses southeastward. The final showers will end Monday night. Winds will be fairly light through midday Sunday then increase out of the south with gusts of 25-35 mph in open wind-prone areas. High pressure will gradually build over the region beginning Tuesday. Drier and warmer weather with occasionally gusty Northwest-Northeast winds can be expected through the end of next week.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

After a cold start to the day, mostly sunny and mild conditions can be expected this afternoon. Many inland areas are currently at or below the freezing mark, including much of the San Joaquin Valley and the high desert. Temperatures this afternoon will warm into the 40s in the mountains to the 60s at lower elevations in the regions with light north winds of 10-20 mph in the mountains. This weekend, a pair of troughs will bring breezy conditions and light precipitation to the region. The first one will reach the central coast Saturday afternoon and most of Southern California during the day Sunday. The second system will arrive Sunday night. Both of these systems will focus on Southern California where 1.00 – 1.50 inches of rain may fall on the south-facing aspects. Central California will see 0.50 – 1.00" along the central coast and Sierras. The snow level may dip to 3,500 feet Sunday afternoon and evening and some light accumulations will be possible on I-5 and I-15. West winds of 20-30 mph will be possible in the Sierras and high desert Saturday afternoon and Sunday night. Next week looks drier and warmer with a ridge building over the region by the end of the week. Temperatures will climb into the 70s at lower elevations with light offshore flow possible by next weekend.

Cal OES Law Missions

- 2017-LAW-33603, 2/21/17 @ 1934 hours: Sacramento County requested two Water Human Remains Detection dogs for a search at the Berm Marina on Brannon Island Rd. The dog teams were requested for a search to be conducted on 2/22/17 @ 0900. Two CARDA dog teams from the El Dorado Sheriff's Office were aware of the incident and agreed to assist. 2/22/17: The HRD dogs identified an area of interest just below the missing subject's boat at the Marina. A side scan sonar was deployed, which identified an object underwater that might be the missing subject.
